Dear Donna,

Digitising our WWI volunteer records: a thank you

I am writing to thank you for volunteering with the Voluntary Aid Detachment (VAD) digitisation project. Your enormous efforts with both transcribing and proof reading the index cards has been truly exceptional and we appreciate the time that you have so generously given.

We are very proud of our history and heritage and many of the services we offer in the UK today, such as loaning wheelchairs and searching for missing family members, started during the First World War.

The website is a fantastic resource that allows us to commemorate the role of British Red Cross volunteers during the First World War. Feedback from users including researchers and family historians has been overwhelmingly positive and I know that the addition of new cards each week is eagerly anticipated.

Once again, we are very grateful for your support I would like to thank you for your continued dedication and commitment to the project. Keep up the good work!

Yours sincerely

Michael Adamson
